INTRODUCTION

Divakaruni's compositions centre around the topics of estrangement and self-change at different levels and attempt to bring up many issues by investigating their foundations, loyalty, family, beginning, local area and character through her novels. In her works, the ladies characters are isolated from their country and they think all the more legitimately, however, they intellectually hold a portion of the customary beliefs. Her Sister of My Heart brings out two cousins from birth to their big day. This clever goes around two cousins named Anju and Sudha who are conceived not many hours contrast from one another around the same time. From the youthful age, the young ladies Sudha and Anju become closest companions, best sisters, and more than that they are incredible ally to one another. Anju and Sudha are committed one another in any case, unique. Being quiet and great looking, Sudha dreams of planning garments and having a family. Anju longs for studying Literature in school. The young ladies get discovered for skipping school and this occasion, alongside a well-being alarm in the family, unexpectedly changes the designs for school to plans of marriage. Book, one closures with Anju and Sudha getting hitched around the same time. Sudha moves with her better half and parents in law who live in one more piece of India. Anju's spouse works in the United States thusly, she intends to go there in the wake of finishing a visa cycle.

COMPLICATIONS IN HUMAN BONDAGE

Marriage has isolated Anju and Sudha and afterward Sudha has taken in confidential about their family's past. This secret makes disgrace and responsibility keeping Sudha pull back from Anju. Be that as it may, her adoration and love for her sister doesn't debilitate, and she even will not steal away because of dread reasoning that it would harm Anju's notoriety. On the evening of their wedding, Anju knows about her husband's attractiveness to Sudha. Notwithstanding, Anju doesn't find any culpability with Sudha, and afterward two youthful companions start to live separate lives.

Sudha rapidly learns the methods of her requesting and controlling mother by marriage. Following five years, she is more than happy to know that she is pregnant. In the interim, Anju's life in the United States has not altogether turned out as she anticipated. Anju and Sudha trade standard correspondences, yet their old fellowship are absent. At first, they both feel that they get pregnant at a similar time. Sudha's mother by marriage comes to realize that Sudha's youngster is a female child. Accordingly, she gets bothered and requests Sudha to go for cutting short the baby expecting the main kid would be a child. Sudha has no place to go and feels extremely terrible that she needs to converse with her again as obvious sisters. Declining to attach her life to another man and hoping to find support from her companion, Sudha chooses to go to the United States. After numerous years, the sisters are brought together, yet future boundaries actually proceeded. Through this novel, Chitra Banerjee makes sense of the voices of ladies in various perspectives. In Divakaruni's Sister of My Heart, Sudha was battling with her better half and mother by marriage to save her unborn child. Despite the fact that her mother by marriage is a female she does not comprehend the sentiments and love of a mother. This occurrence associates the issue of Marikolunthu in women. Roadster composed by Anita Nair. Following quite a while of her marriage with Ebenezer Paulraj, she gets pregnant. Feeling overpowered she needs to pass it on to her mom first. Whenever she attempts to call her mom, her significant other intrudes on her requesting to go for abortion. Finally, Sudha leaves her significant other and gets together with her cousin sister Anju in America. In America, she lives for a short range of time in light of the fact that Anju's spouse ruined her. Consequently, without illuminating Anju, she goes out and headed off to some place.

There is a steady vibe of wistfulness and reality in Divakaruni's novels. Her novels show a contention among custom and advancement. They battle for keeping up with the cutting-edge values and figure out a character of their own in the new and environment. Her heroes try to incorporate customs with the advanced qualities which are the requirements of great importance. They know that it is so challenging to get ground breaking thoughts in this man centric set up where the authority begins from the oldest male in the family. In this way, they get used to the unbending nature of customs however with delays figure out their own way of life as new ladies living with conventional values.

Sudha and Anjus' connection is great relationship which is unadulterated and brilliant. They are not blood related however they are certified sisters in every one of the ways. They battle, snicker, cried, and have done every one of the naughty exercises and continuously remain standing for one another. Anju is from privileged and Sudha comes from the lower standing however class struggle never happens between them. Both are gifted to each other, Anju the smart and clever and Sudha the magnificence and humble. That's what anju says "I can tell Sudha everything. I feel and not need to make sense of any of it. She'll take a gander at me with those huge unblinking eyes and grin a small grin, and I'll realize she figures out me perfectly. There is an ideal agreement with the two of them. They never fret over the rest of the world. Their indivisible closeness is a primary subject of analysis for their neighbours, companions and family members in the society. Saritha Aunty prides herself for their honesty seeing them going into the house inseparably.

From the day they born, Sudha and Anju have been joined in more than one way that their moms find very challenging to comprehend. After marriage, their life gets totally different and takes unexpected inverse turns that they oversee actually. Since the distance has grown up, they never license to disappear the bond they keep up with. There is a sharp difference between the existences of Sudha and Anju. Sudha invests her total energy in carrying out family responsibilities however Anju plays out all outside fills in according to her desire concentrating on her number one subject in school. Sudha's pregnancy gives her a day-to-day existence growth opportunity. Her significant other shows no response when her mother by marriage demands her to go for early termination. Subsequently, she chooses to have the kid and goes to America. It is helped by Anju through her work that keeps her financial independency. In any case, her physical and stress can be the prime justification behind her miscarriage. The women in Divakaruni books are caught between the conventional customs of India and westernized culture of present-day India. The uniqueness of these ladies is totally modified. They see themselves and change occurs because of the unsure idea of their current circumstance. Divakaruni's characters move past individualistic way to deal with a superior universe of understanding.

CONCLUSION

Sudha arises as a woman of power and assurance. Whenever the connection among her and her little girl is tested, she advances from concealment to an empowered mother. Her mom Nalini isn't happy with her daughter's appearance. Sudha gradually moves towards a gallant lady making her own choice throughout everyday life. She chooses to keep the child and separation her better half. It is Anju's love and backing as a valid sister who really helps her out and urges Sudha to bring up her girl as a solitary parent. Anju on the other hand begins setting off for college and gets the information that she yearns for. At long last, she attempts to absorb herself the new culture and the American lifestyle. The neighbourly inclination and force of sisterhood is the pinnacle of solidarity in their life.
